

Seminar

"Contested Spaces, Competing Narratives: Towards Human Rights and Democracy in Pakistan" April 6 – 7, 2007, Tufts & Harvard Universities

Concept note: Current events in Pakistan make the focus of this seminar, the struggle for human rights and democracy in Pakistan even more relevant. The seminar brings together diverse perspectives on the struggle for democratic spaces in the face of increasing militarization and militancy. What is the role of the media in supporting the democratic struggle and in countering 'disappearances', air-strikes, and attacks on journalists, gender violence and increase in 'religious' extremism? What are the broader implications of these trends for Pakistan, South Asia and beyond? What is the role and impact of US foreign policy? What are the positive trends and how can they be strengthened?

Event format: A keynote speech and discussion sets the conference agenda on Friday evening, with brief presentations, roundtable discussions and question and answer sessions on Saturday. The event is open to the public and will engage students as well as the expatriate community that since 9/11 has been increasingly engaged in democratic politics in the US as well as 'back home' in Pakistan. The seminar proceedings will be made available as resource materials for future work on the area and for policy makers.
